STATEMENT OF MATERIAL FACTS

13. Defendant Fifty Second Street Hotel Associate, L.L.C. d/b/a Novotel New York is a hotel owned by hospitality service companies and Defendants Accor Business and Leisure North America, Inc. and Novotel Hotels USA, Inc. Defendants had 400 locations in 60 countries during Plaintiff's employment and has since then acquired more locations and is expanding its presence in New York.

14. Plaintiff has worked for Defendants since April 2008 in the Toronto, Canada location and since February 2011, worked in the New York City location.

15. Prior to working with Defendants, Plaintiff worked for another luxury international hotel and resorts chain.

16. Plaintiff has over a decade of experience in hotels and hospitality with a strong background in both reservations and revenues. Plaintiff has a masters in Marketing of Services & Revenue Management and a bachelors degree in international strategy and management. She is fluent in French, Spanish and English.

17. Although Plaintiff transferred to Defendants' New York location in February 2011 to grow her potential in revenue management, she discovered that such opportunities and all preferential treatment were given only to non-Muslim White employees.

18. The two (2) directors during Plaintiff's tenure Albane Colmenares and Jeremie Catez were White non-Muslim and the General Manager Marc Sternagel ("Marc") was also a non-Muslim White male.

19. The work environment was socially liberal, inappropriate, and completely hostile for any employee of a conservative Muslim religion.

20. Marc would kiss and flirt with many of his assistants and female employees.

21. During holidays, Tiffany bracelets were given to female employees who allowed themselves to be the object of sexual flirtation in the workplace against clear anti-fraternization policies.

22. Neither the senior managers or the female employees were ever admonished or suffered any adverse actions as a result. In fact, they were elevated and preferred for that reason.

23. Marc frequently made fun of an Indian employee due to her accent and such race/national origin discrimination and distaste towards people of different backgrounds created a hostile work environment for Plaintiff.

24. Due to her religious background and culture, Plaintiff did not engage in inappropriate conduct with Marc and wanted to advance based on her substantive capacity demonstrated by her experience and masters in revenue management.

25. Over five (5) years in the New York location, Plaintiff continued to watch lesser qualified candidates get priority and seniority over her and be supported to succeed.

26. While Plaintiff was never offered the proper training to grow in revenue management, she was often forced to train others. Defendants were willing to train Sophie Le Vot and Lorraine Merger (White non-Muslim female employees) but not Plaintiff.

27. Arielle Desoucey (White non-Muslim female American) became a sales manager although she started as an executive assistant with no experience.

28. Jeremie Catez ("Jeremie") and Sebastien Hamel ("Sebastien") (both White non-Muslim males) went from reservations to revenue management within two (2) years but Plaintiff was given no such opportunity in the five (5) years in the Times Square location. She was even denied a hotel analytics class which is $300 while other employees are offered up to $1000 in similar programs to advance in their career.

29. Ultimately Plaintiff was terminated with no performance based reason because she became persistent in seeking a promotion and a position equivalent to her skills and experience.

30. In 2014, Plaintiff started to raise publicly in her reviews that Defendants were failing to provide her with proper training or support to advance in her career.

31. On September 18, 2014, Marc sent a mass email asking for assistance in Revenue Management and suggesting the hiring of an intern to support Jeremie and Sebastien. In fact the email suggested they should sign up anybody that could help. Although Plaintiff would be the most natural choice with an educational background in that area and hospitality/hotel experience much stronger than any intern, Defendants failed to give her a chance due to her race/national origin/color and religion.

32. Most egregiously, Plaintiff offered her assistance for this project to her direct supervisor Jeremie who did not respond to her request at all. Plaintiff even emailed him her desire to be included in revenue management and her strong background on September 24th. After receiving no response, Plaintiff made an official complaint to Human Resources on September 29th stating that her job description involves revenue management tasks and interns are being hired to perform the same tasks she is not given growth and career advancement opportunities in.

33. In March 2015, Plaintiff attempted to make a lateral move within the Company. Sofitel New York had a position for Assistant Director of Revenue and Plaintiff tried to advance by a lateral move. She was told by the hotel manager that she lacked the appropriate qualifications because of the lack of revenue opportunities provided to her at the Times Square Novotel location. Therefore, she was prejudiced from any potential lateral advancement because of her managers' discriminatory motives.

34. In June 31, 2015, Plaintiff applied for Sebastien's position when he resigned as Reservations and Revenue Manager. When Plaintiff was hired as Assistant Reservations Manager in 2011, the position reported to the Director of Revenue and therefore revenues and reservations have traditionally been the same department. To avoid providing Plaintiff the opportunity, Defendants retroactively decided to split the role into two – revenue analyst and reservations manager. However, the requirements for both positions were simply a bachelors degree and 3-5 years in hospitality experience and the ability to speak French. Plaintiff has a masters from a French university, speaks French, and has 10 years of experience in hospitality. When looking at the job description of the revenue analyst position, they are very much the same ones Plaintiff has in her job description. Most incredibly, there was even a "Revenue management in training" position. Defendants cannot provide as a credible excuse that Defendants wished for Plaintiff to remain in reservations to grow her future there as she was denied even the reservation manager position.

35. On September 11, 2015, Plaintiff emailed Human Resources and Albane Colmenares (new Director of Revenue Management) about her desire to advance in her career. Specifically, she pointed out that certain duties in the revenue analyst position like reviewing room and rate availability, daily mapping of reservations, checking the quality and accuracy of reservations, assistance in front office roles were mirrored in her job description and she had the aptitude to handle these roles and all the roles required of the revenue analyst. Ultimately she was denied this position, the reservations and revenue manager position and the reservations manager position. Ms. Lorraine Merger was a new analyst who is related to the CEO of Accor North America and therefore although she had one (1) year of experience as an intern, she was allowed to get the revenue analyst position. In her conversations with Human Resources, Plaintiff started to raise that she felt this was related to race/national origin/color and religion discrimination. Up to this point, although Defendants did not promote her to revenue management, Plaintiff has had steady positive reviews and feed back in reservations. Her E-2 visa had been sponsored every year through the company sponsored law firm Fragomen without any issues until Plaintiff's active human resources reports.

36. In response to Plaintiff's Human Resources complaints, no proper investigation was conducted as to potential discriminatory motive in this failure to support and promote Plaintiff. No proper explanation was ever provided when Plaintiff raised the "workload" excuse was pre-textual as she has shown incredible ability to work long hours and work in very technical areas and was in fact already handling some revenue functions.

37. As a result of Plaintiff's legitimate human resources complaints concerning discrimination and failure to promote, Defendants decided to terminate Plaintiff five (5) months later in February 2016 when it was the natural time to renew her visa. Once again, Defendants never had any issue renewing Plaintiff's visa prior to her September complaints. There was no performance based reason provided for Plaintiff's termination. Plaintiff's role was not eliminated and in fact she was training her replacement during her last week of employment. Plaintiff was not laid off during a restructuring and was the only person terminated. In fact, at around the time of Plaintiff's termination, Defendants sponsored the E-2 visa for a restaurant manager and his wife (both are White, non-Muslim) as well as their relocation expenses. Plaintiff was terminated in direct retaliation for making legitimate reports of discrimination. Defendants have always held Plaintiff's visa hostage over her. Other employees were promoted much quicker as they could lateral to other companies without the additional barrier of also asking for work visa sponsorship. Defendants made clear that foreign nationals were not to "rock the boat" or make any human resources complaints. In fact, Defendants made no effort to conceal their discriminatory intent as they terminated Plaintiff's employment by not renewing her visa rather than even attempting to complain as to her work performance.

38. Once again, Plaintiff repeatedly reported race/national origin/color and religion discrimination to Defendants since September 2015 and was therefore terminated in February 2016 although she was performing her role very well.

39. The temporal proximity between Plaintiff's human resources complaints and the decision to terminate her is inescapable evidence of retaliation, especially in light of Plaintiff's long tenure with Defendants. Additionally, Defendants actively sought a reservations manager and intern to replace Plaintiff's job duties as she was being terminated and requested her to train her successor.

Therefore, there is no legitimate business reason for the termination except for obvious race/national origin/color and religion discrimination and retaliation.

40. To make clear the race/national origin/color and religion discrimination and the demographics during Plaintiff's employment, she submits the below description:

White Employees

- Jeremie Catez (White, non-Muslim, Jewish)– started as an intern with no degree or previous hotel experience and yet promoted to revenue manager at Notovel after a 1 year internship at Sofitel
